Mr. Gerard said that the word cremation was not used in his interview with Patrick. He did tell him about postponing the funeral.

Later on the same day hemet Baker and Patrick near the latter's office. Mr. Baker had a bundle of papers, which the witness said belonged to the Rice estate.

Mr. Moore asked Mr. Gerard what Baker and Patrick were going to "fix up."

Mr. Moore asked Mr. Gerard what Baker and Patrick were going to "fix up."

"I understood." said Mr. Gerard, "that Baker insisted that Patrick was not the legal custodian of the oacers."

Q. Were the papers not finally placed in a mutual safe? A. Yes: in the Hotel Normandle.

Detective Sergeant Vallely followed Mr. Gerard. He testified to having seen Patrick on the day of Rice's death at Patrick's house. He described his visit, there with Mr. Gerard. He detailed the conversation. He was introduced by Mr. Gerard as a member of the firm. Gerard mentioned checks, and then Patrick mentioned checks, and then Patrick mentioned the will. Vallely asked him what was the necessity of a will if he had th assignment of all the property. Patrick said there really wasn't any use. He also said that he was not a beneficiary. The witness also told of Patrick's statement that Rice died from eating nine bananas, and that the burial was to take place in Wisconsin the coming Thursday.

At the funeral the next morning Vallely went to the Patrick house about o'clock.

Pressed to tell whether or not Patrick said anything about cremation on the night of the visit, the witness could not answer positively. He said Patrick spoke of the cremation that night or the next day.

Neither could the witness remember whether Patrick told him that night or the next day that the checks had come to him as the result of a secret trust, the purpose of which was to perpetuate the name of Rice.

wondering where the squeaking sound is coming from. When you enter you are surprised to see so many railings, gates, alleys and wire fences. Who knows? Perhaps Horgan & Slattery had a hand in erecting the fences, for there is enough timber in this room to build a yacht. It is a sort of crystal maze. You are likely to get lost wandering through the different gates. Be careful and don't get into the prisoners' pen, for there is a policeman there (Patrick's double) who will take you over the Bridge of Sighs.
